PROGRAM

Dietrich Buxtehude
(1637-1707)

Prelude and Fugue in D major

Buxtehude, a typical representative of the early North German style; exercised a great influence on Bach, who journeyed from Arnstadt to Lubeck to hear him.

John Stanley
(1713-1786)

Voluntary in D minor

Stanley, an English organist who was blinded at the age of three, was held in high esteem by Handel; his "Voluntaries" were written for chamber organ, and provided with exact directions for registration.

Carl Phillip Emmanuel Bach
(1714-1788)

Sonata No. 3 in F major

Bach's second son is often called the "Berlin or Hamburg Bach" his treatise, "An Essay on the True Art of Playing the Clavier", is one of the most important sources for the performance practice of the time.

Johann Sebastian Bach
(1685-1750)

Tocatta, Adagio and Fugue in C major

This work, written in Weimar 1709, is unique among Bach's organ output in having an arioso middle movement between the Tocatta and the Fugue.

W. A. Mozart
(1756-1791)

Fantasia in F minor, K. 608

The Doblinger publishing house (Munich-Vienna) has just published Monika Henking's new edition, following the Urtext exactly, of Mozart's three fantasias originally written for a Viennese mechanical organ, K. 594, 608, and 616. K. 608, written in 1791, is in three parts.

Max Reger
(1873-1916)

Fantasia and Fugue, Op. 135b

This work, composed in 1916 and dedicated to Richard Strauss, undoubtedly represents the high point of Reger's organ output. It was originally laid out on much broader lines, but the influence of the great Karl Straube caused Reger, to significantly shorten the piece and concentrate its content.
